

Contents

|  |           |
|--|-----------|
| Acknowledgments   | ix |
| Introduction  | 1  |
| Chapter 1 • The Convergence of Voice, The Artifacts of Memory:        |           |
| Theoretical Orientations  | 14 |
| Anxiety and the Lack of Lack   | 14        |
| Anxious Influence and a Lacanian Reconceptualization of Bloom                | 20        |
| Humanism and Ideologies of the Self  | 25        |
| Chapter 2 • The Renaissance, Rome, and Humanism's Classical Crisis    | 30 |
| Rome's Ruins and the Resurrection of the Secular Self                        | 32        |
| Rome on the English Stage  | 45        |
| Chapter 3 • Anxiety and Constructions of the Text:                    |           |
| Dialogues with a Classical Past                                       | 54 |
| Lyricism and the Processes of Identity in the French Pléiade          | 55        |
| Marvell's Two Gardens: Rewriting the Roman Hortus                     | 65        |
| Catullus and the Sons of Ben   | 73        |
| Chapter 4 • Miltonic Elegy and the Rebirth of a Roman (Split) Subject | 85 |
| Latin Elegy and the (New) Roman Subject                                      | 91        |
| "Christ's Nativity" and Exorcising the Pagan Past                            | 104       |
| Lycidas and Allusive Self-Consciousness                               | 111       |

|  |            |
|--|------------|
| Chapter 5 • Milton's Heroic Action and Formal Falls | 125 |
| The Hero Is in the Form                                    | 128        |
| Epic Action and Tragic Falls                               | 133        |
| Epilogue  | 146 |
| Selected Bibliography                               | 155        |
| Index   | 167        |